

Many have times when they want or need to be creative but lack the personal skills or peers to do so.

Whether it be for developing the next part of a story, fleshing out a character's design, or finding deeper parts in a story to build your paper off, it can often be hard to finding those bits of extra detail on your own, especially if you're one who struggles to be creative. Some would suggest asking your friends or peers, but that's not always easy, nor always an option, so what could be a way to overcome these struggles?